Do I need a parking sticker?

It was a bit awkward for this plane Thursday as it turned into a campus parking lot. The plane was taxied to campus by Provo Aviation, Inc. to draw interest for the Flying Cougar Club on campus as part of Club Week. During Club Week, sponsored by the ASBYU Organizations Office, campus groups present displays in the Wilkinson Center to attract new members. Apparently the Flying Cougars' display wouldn't quite fit in the building, but students have a chance to see it on the lawn between the Harold B. Lee Library and Wilkinson Center. Earny Beam, the club's president, said the Flying Cougars meet Wednesday at 8 p.m. in 214 JRCB for students interested in joining.

Khomeini taking calculated risk

PARIS (AP) — The Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is sticking to his plan to go home to Iran Friday, but his aides said Wednesday that the Moslem holy man was taking "a calculated gamble" because the Iranian army does not want him to return to Tehran.

There was doubt whether the self-exiled Moslem leader could find an airline to fly him home, and the aides said that if his plane could not land in Iran, it would return to Paris.

Dr. Ibrahim Yazdi, Khomeini's chief aide, told reporters the ayatollah and his entourage would leave Paris Thursday night aboard a chartered Air France jumbo 747 jumbo jet and arrive in Tehran at about 8 a.m. Friday — 11:30 p.m. EST Thursday.

"If we cannot land in Tehran we will go to another airport in Iran, and if we don't find one we will come back here," Yazdi said.

However, police sources in Athens, Greece, said Wednesday that Khomeini's entourage in Paris had notified Greek authorities the Iranian religious leader might stop in Greece en route to Iran.

The sources said airport security officials and police in the Greek capital had been put on the alert. A spokesman for Athens' exclusive Grande Bretagne Hotel said Khomeini's party had requested 16 rooms, but specified the plan "was not certain."

Iranian military leaders loyal to Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi closed the Tehran airport Wednesday and prevented Iran Air, the national airline, from sending a plane to Paris to pick up Khomeini. But the military governor of Tehran, Gen. Mehdi Rihimi, later ordered the airport reopened.

Earlier, the Iranian general said the airport had been closed because "opportunists" planned to disrupt operations at the facility. He apparently was referring to Khomeini supporters who had planned to give the Boeing 747 a rousing sendoff when it departed to pick up the Moslem leader.

Khomeini assistants said they have chartered an Air France jumbo jet, but still hoped for an Iran Air flight if the Air France charter failed to materialize. Air France refused any comment on a possible charter.

Thousands of pro-Khomeini demonstrators drove to the airport Wednesday morning in hopes of seeing the Iran Air jet take off. But they found troops and British built Chieftain tanks blocking the airport. Onlookers were dispersed by armed soldiers.

Utah demands balanced budget

By WENDY OGATA
Universe Staff Writer

Utah became the 24th state Wednesday to pass a solution which would require the federal government to have a balanced budget except during a national emergency, such as war.

The resolution which passed in the State Senate 25-1 would give the federal government the option of issuing a constitutional amendment to require balancing the federal budget, or calling a constitutional convention to propose the amendment. Failure by Congress to pass such an amendment could result in the calling of a constitutional convention, an amendment procedure that has not been used since the constitution was written in 1787. Ten more states are needed to ratify the resolution before convention could be called.

One of the opponents of the resolution, Sen. Karl Snow, Jr., R-Provo, said he did not oppose having a balanced budget but was against the calling of a constitutional convention.

"Once that convention assemblies, they can change anything," he said. In an interview after the morning session, Snow mentioned that the Philadelphia convention which was called to amend the Articles of Confederation, ended up doing away with the articles altogether and writing a whole new constitution.

"Now I don't mean to say that a constitutional convention would end up in changing the whole constitution," he said. "But I think that the better approach is simply that Congress submit to us a proposed amendment."

Snow said he believed many of the legislators who voted in favor of the resolution didn't realize they were "formally calling upon Congress to call a constitutional convention."

Sen. Karl G. Swan, D-Tooele, another opponent of the resolution, agreed with Snow's fears of a constitutional convention, saying there is a possibility of "opening a can of worms" by calling a convention.

Swan also opposed the idea of the resolution requiring the federal government to have a balanced budget. He said that deficit spending has been used since the 1930s as a way of keeping the economy from expanding too fast or getting it moving.

In other Senate action, a bill which would require lending institutions to pay interest on escrow accounts in connection with real estate loans, was given preliminary approval by a 19-8 vote.

A major opponent of the bill, Sen. Robert O. Bowen, D-Spanish Fork, said the bill tends to be "deceptive."

He said the bill would "immunize" banking institutions from further litigation such as the collection of money for damages and lawyer's fees.

In the House, a circle was placed on a resolution that would recognize the Republic of China (Taiwan) as a sister state. Rep. Lee Farnsworth, R-Provo, who proposed the circle, said he did so because he had some "concerns" about the resolution.

In an interview after the session, he said one reason he proposed the circle was the resolution called for a copy of the resolution to be forwarded to the ambassador of the Republic of China to the U.S.. Because of recent changes in relations with Taiwan, "there is no such person," he said.

Farnsworth also questioned the possibility of having a sister state relation between a state and a nation.

Consumer Price Report

Inflation rise biggest since '74

WASHINGTON (AP) — California's tax-cutting Proposition 13 helped push inflation in December, but consumer prices still rose 9 percent during 1978, the second biggest leap in 30 years, the government reported Wednesday.

The Labor Department also reported at workers' buying power declined 4 percent on the average during 1978. The inflation rate for the year, fueled by sharp increases for food, housing and medical care, was the highest since a 12.2 percent rise in 1974, when the economy was reacting to soaring prices for imported oil.

Food prices were up 11.6 percent in 1978, housing costs 9.9 percent and medical care 8.8 percent. The year's biggest bargain was clothing, which rose only 2 percent.

Excluding 1974, the last time consumer prices rose as much as 9 percent in a year was 1947. Prices rose 6.8 percent in 1977, but wage earners increased their buying power in that year.

The year-end consumer price report affects the pay of up to 2.6 million workers, whose labor contracts provide for cost-of-living wage increases based on the December or fourth quarter figures.

The Labor Department said California's sharp property tax cut was a major factor in holding December's consumer price rise to 0.6 percent — equal to an annual inflation rate of nearly 7.5 percent. Consumer prices rose 0.5 percent in November.

Had it not been for the tax cut, prices in December would have gone up 0.8 percent, closer to the average inflation rate for the full year.

Voters in California, the most populous state, triggered a nationwide tax revolt last June when they approved a referendum to slash property taxes by more than 60 percent.

William Cox, deputy chief economist for the Commerce Department, said the December figures were "substantially influenced" by Proposition 13. But he said the impact of the tax-cut on consumer prices would be limited to the one month because the tax reduction for all of 1978 was figured into December's report.

Labor Department economists said similar tax-cutting moves by other states would not have as great an impact on overall consumer prices unless the states were very populous, like New York. "A tax cut in Maryland wouldn't be felt nationally," one economist said.

Nine percent inflation is considerably higher than the 6.1 percent rate forecast a year ago by the Carter administration, which has made its campaign against inflation the top domestic priority for 1979.

The administration predicted this week that inflation in 1979 would be 7.4 percent, a figure raised from a 6.5 percent estimate made only last fall.

Government economists took heart in the latest figures, which showed that inflation had slowed from an 11.4 percent annual rate during the second quarter of 1978 to a 7.9 percent rate during the final three months.

Cox cautioned that the favorable trend did not "indicate we're out of the woods," but he said it should help President Carter win support for his anti-inflation effort, which includes voluntary wage-price guidelines.

According to the government's latest report, the Consumer Price Index ended the year at 202.9, meaning that a group of products costing $100 in the base year of 1967 cost $202.90 in December.

Changes made in ELWC staff

Significant organizational changes have taken place in the Housing and General Services offices at BYU, says Support Services Vice President Fred A. Schwendiman.

Ever since the unexpected death of Wilkinson Center director Lyle Curtis last September, the ELWC post has remained vacant.

J. Elliot Cameron, dean of Student Life, said "The responsibilities of the Wilkinson Center have grown too great for one person to manage effectively. Consequently, we have decided to divide the responsibilities."

The division will consist of two separate organizations. One will be responsible for the business affairs of the center and will be under the direction of Schwendiman. The other will be concerned with student activities and will fall under Cameron's jurisdiction.

Immediately under Schwendiman, in charge of business affairs, will be Clyde J. Bair, promoted during the Fall semester to director of Housing and General Services.

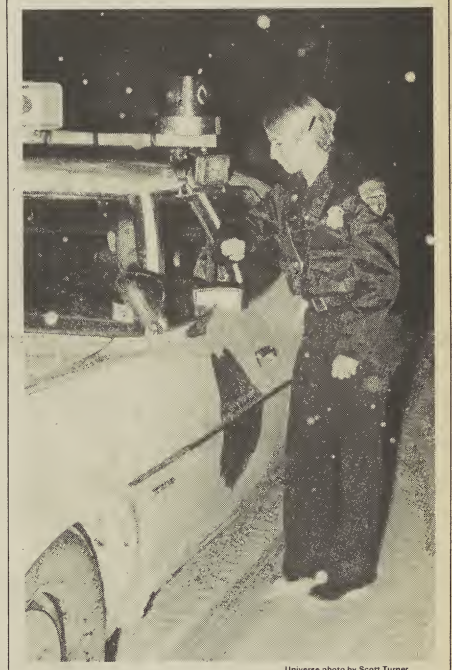

Robert Moss, who was the Wilkinson Center business manager under Curtis, has been named manager of business functions and physical facilities for the center.

Promoted within the ELWC organization was Robert Thornock, who was formerly an assistant to the director of housing. Thornock will be responsible for public relations and coordination of the center's facilities for all functions and activities.

Schwendiman said that in the past student government activities were reported by the director of the center to the dean of student life. Under the new organization, those activities will be reported directly to the Dean's Office by Maren Mountsin, assistant dean of student life in charge of student government and activities.

Other personnel changes include the promotion of Delyle Barton, former director of housing, as an assistant manager of off-campus housing, to assistant to the director of housing. Curt Wynder, whose position as assistant director of the Wilkinson Center has been eliminated, has been appointed manager of off-campus housing.

PATTY KEYS...Orem's only female patrol officer

Policewoman fulfills ambition

By JOHN JESSE
Universe Staff Writer

With the aid of a holstered revolver and 20-inch billy club, Orem police officer Patty Keys says she handles her job like any other police officer.

"I decided when I was in high school that I wanted to be a police officer," Miss Keys said. "I didn't like the job the local police were doing so I thought even though I was little, I wanted to give it a try."

Miss Keys became an officer after interning with the Orem City Police and attending the police academy in Salt Lake City, where she competed directly with men.

"I did the same thing as everybody else," the White Sands, Wash., native said. "We went to the same classes at the same time and we took the same tests."

Now as an officer with the department, the 23-year-old Orem resident handles all the responsibilities normally associated with the job of a police officer. She covers traffic accidents, public disturbances and handles any situation that needs police attention while patrolling alone in her police car.

But do people treat her as just another officer?

"I feel like the average citizen views the police officer, the car, the badge — not the person," Miss Keys said.

She said her fellow officers also treat her like a normal officer.

"I probably get a little more attention, but when it comes to the job, I am like any other officer," she said.

In dealing with tough situations, Miss Keys said she handles them like any other officer would.

"I think truthfully there are times for everybody when they are scared."

"If I think I am going to need help, I am not too proud to say so. I will get help as fast as I can and any man would do the same," she said.

Off the job, things are not quite so normal, Miss Keys said, in explaining her dating situations.

"If I know the guy beforehand, it is usually all right, but if it is a blind date or something, he usually wants to know all about my work," Miss Keys said.

"When I go out with somebody, I want them to be taking out Patty Keys, not Officer Keys," she said. She also has some advice for other women planning careers in law enforcement.

"But had better want it bad, real bad, because it is a lot of work for me and for the other officers also," Miss Keys said.

Despite the hard work, Miss Keys said she is happy working as a police officer and her father is "really proud" of her.

"But he thought I'd get married while I was at BYU," the blond-haired, blue-eyed officer said. "To tell the truth, so did I."

Pope offers to mediate dispute

VATICAN CITY (AP) — On the eve of a week-long papal trip to Latin America, the Vatican said Wednesday Pope John Paul II will mediate a Chilean-Argentine dispute that had raised fears of armed conflict.

Vatican observers agreed the role was a "gamble" for the new pope.

The pope leaves Thursday at 8 a.m. (2 a.m. EST) for the Dominican Republic on his way to open the third Latin American bishop's conference in Mexico City. It is his first trip abroad as pope.

Foster children in Guyana?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional panel, opening hearings on child abuse, announced Wednesday it is investigating whether as many as 150 foster care children were placed in the Peoples Temple before the mass murder-suicide last November in Guyana.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said that at his request, the General Accounting Office is examining country foster care records in California and the list of the dead from Jonestown, the jungle commune founded by temple leader Jim Jones.

"If names turn up on both lists," Cranston said, "it means the Rev. Jim Jones may have received hundreds of thousands of dollars in government child support and that some of those children died in the Jonestown tragedy."

Snow still crippling Midwest

NEW YORK (AP) — Wind-swept snows dealt another severe blow to crippled Chicago and paralyzed much of the Midwest on Wednesday, while gale-force winds and tornadoes wrecked dozens of homes on Florida's Gulf Coast.

In Nebraska, where cattle are dying of starvation, Gov. Charles Thone signed an emergency proclamation dispatching National Guard helicopters and trucks to evacuate stranded farmers and open roads to get food to the stricken herds.

New York mayor to visit China

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch wants to pay an official visit to China later this year to sell New York City as the "financial and tourist capital of the world."

Peter J. Solomon, deputy mayor for economic development and policy, said Monday he would meet with China's deputy ambassador to the United Nations to explore plans for the mayor's visit.

Solomon said Koch had been invited to visit China by a group of Chinese mayors who visited him at City Hall during a trip here.

Connally enters race for president in 1980

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a platform emphasizing budget cutting, free enterprise and a strong defense, John B. Connally on Wednesday entered the race for the 1980 Republican presidential nomination.

The former Texas governor declared his candidacy in a speech at the National Press Club, and said he would enter every primary his campaign funds permit.

There will be about 35 presidential primaries next year.

Saying he has "no apologies to make for having served in the Nixon administration," Connally said he has faith the American people will accept the not guilty verdict in his Watergate-related bribery trial.

"I have faith in this country and I have faith in the American people," Connally said when asked if he feared the charge would damage him politically.

Connally's declaration drew quick comment from two likely rivals.

"He's welcome to the list of candidates," said Ronald Reagan. "He's in the fray, now."

The former California governor was here for a meeting with Republicans and lining up support for his candidacy, expected to become official before long.

Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker, Jr. of Tennessee called Connally "a distinguished public servant," and added that "he has had his trials and his difficulties, but he will be one of the candidates for the Republican nomination."

Mormon dissident's plea denied by Utah justices

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Supreme Court has ruled that Portland, Ore., attorney Douglas Wallace was properly banned from entering Temple Square during semiannual conferences of the Mormon Church.

Wallace had appealed a lower court's restraining order barring the excommunicated Mormon from church-owned property. The order was issued after he unsuccessfully attempted to take over a televised meeting of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints for the announced purpose of placing the church's leaders on trial.

When blocked from reaching the pulpit, Wallace said to an usher, "Don't touch me, I am the Lord," a witness told the lower court which issued the restraining order. Wallace also told the court he had been directed by God to take over leadership of the Mormon Church.

Wallace, who had been a local official in the church near his Vancouver, Wash., home, was excommunicated after ordaining a black to the church's priesthood when it was still church practice to deny that right to blacks. Last year, the church announced that the practice was changed by divine revelation.

The Supreme Court ruled that while there was "no reason to doubt the sincerity of the defendant's beliefs, nor the fervor of his commitment to his objectives, there must nevertheless be forbearance by individuals for the good order of society generally." The court held that Wallace's interruption of church services would infringe upon the rights of others. "The judgment here places no greater nor different restraint upon the defendant than that which is required of everyone by common custom and good manners, as well as by law: to allow others their freedom of religion in conducting and participating in religious services according to their desire," the justices said.

Patient drowns in escape try

A patient at the Utah State Hospital in Provo drowned Wednesday afternoon after fleeing from a recreation therapy outing at Utah Lake State Park.

Craig Ostler, 21, Layton, was ice skating with a group of about 20 other patients when he reportedly broke away from the group in what appeared to be "an attempt to go AWOL," said Yvonne Oliver, superintendent of the state hospital.

"About five of our staff pursued him," Mrs. Oliver said, "but he disappeared from view." She said other people in the area saw him swimming at the mouth of the Provo River, when he was overcome by the frigid waters and drowned.

"By that time," Mrs. Oliver said, "the hospital staff had contacted state park authorities and had gone out looking for him in a boat." Ostler's body was found in water estimated to be seven feet deep.

Singer shooting point of debate

The shooting of John Singer came up in a brief exchange between two lawmakers Wednesday in the Utah House of Representatives.

Taking advantage of a point of personal privilege in the House session, Rep. Samuel S. Taylor, D-Salt Lake, raised questions about the death of Singer, who was killed last Thursday while resisting arrest on the lane leading to his Marion, Utah, farm. "Singer was a victim of society which said he had no rights," Taylor said.

If the courts hadn't awarded custody of Singer's children to family services, Taylor added, the polygamist "never would have threatened anyone's life."

The representative said that at one time he visited Singer on his farm and tried to arrange a compromise between him and the state.

According to an Associated Press dispatch, Taylor asked if Singer would talk to Second District Juvenile Court Judge John Farr Larson on the Marion farm. Singer said he would have the judge over to dinner, Larson declined.

When the representative asked the judge if he would allow Singer to meet with him in his chambers without arrest, again Larson declined, the AP story said.

Taylor then asked Larson if he would punish Singer by ordering him confined on his farm. The judge once again said "No."

In response to Taylor's remarks during the House session, Rep. C. Demont Judd, Jr., D-Weber, said Singer was not a victim of society because he was the one who pulled the gun and aimed it at the officers.

SLC personnel director resigns

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — City Personnel Director Robert T. Mullally has resigned and Police Chief E. L. Willoughby says he will consider resigning, in the wake of the unsuccessful attempt to have Willoughby take over the personnel department.

Three city commissioners signed a letter saying Willoughby would be in charge of personnel. The letter was delivered to Mullally Jan. 12 and was leaked a couple of days later, after which the action was rescinded.

Mayor Ted Wilson called it a deplorable, secretive power play on the part of Public Safety Commissioner Glen Greener and Willoughby.

Study Abroad meeting tonight

BYU's international study-travel program will be explained and a graphic presentation given during an open house of the Department of Study Abroad tonight at 7:30 in 445 MARB.

One of the features of the open house will be a multi-media presentation entitled "Europe: An Adventure in Learning." The slide-sound production was photographed and edited by Floyd Holman and presents the activities of BYU programs in London, Madrid, Vienna and Paris. It also describes the 30-day rotation experience in which students from each of the centers tour Europe with prolonged stops at the other BYU locations.

In addition to the European programs, there is a study program available in Mexico this summer, according to Dr. Joseph O. Baker, chairman of the Department of Study Abroad.

Tonight's open house will give interested students an opportunity to meet the faculty directors of each of the programs and receive detailed information about the courses and special travel experiences offered. Dr. Baker said one of the optional travel programs available for the June to December period will be a 10-day visit to Israel.

BYU Study Abroad offers students a minimum of 16 hours credit and a maximum of 25-27 hours. The main intent of the program is to relate classwork to field experience in the cities and countries where the student is studying, Baker said.

Application forms and additional information, including financial details, may be obtained at the open house or at the Study Abroad office, 223 HRCB.

Planning Commission

Y facility protested

By NANCY BENAC
Universe Staff Writer

Approximately 50 concerned citizens attended the Provo Planning Commission meeting Wednesday night to protest the building of the BYU Leo Ellsworth Meat and Livestock Center at 2230 North and University Ave.

Jerry Howell, director of the community development department, announced that the city attorney had ruled the planning commission had no power to render an interpretation of a zoning ordinance and so the item was withdrawn from discussion by the commission.

But because there were citizens in attendance to learn more about the proposed building, an informational meeting was held simultaneously with the planning commission meeting.

After a presentation by Fred Schwendiman, BYU support services vice president, and other BYU officials, most citizens approved the new building.

Their main concern centered around the outdoor pens and odors from the animals that presently exist on the site. Jim Hollingsworth, a member of the Riverside Country Club board of directors, said, "I don't feel that any livestock activity is proper for this sort of a residential area."

The next move will be "an administrative decision" to be made by the zoning staff, city attorney and city commission, according to Howell.

If it is deemed for educational purposes, the building will then be cleared for construction, since that is in compliance with the restrictions for a PF (public facility) zone. If it is ruled that the building is primarily for agricultural purposes, a building permit would not be issued because the area is not zoned for agricultural use.

Schwendiman said of the proposed building, "We haven't gone Cadillac luxury, but it's first class. It's not a blinkin' animal farm."

In action taken by the planning commission, a hearing to discuss revisions in the proposed sign ordinance was tabled until planning members have had time to hold study sessions to examine the proposed revisions.

The proposed revisions would allow more signs to be erected within the city limits and allow for more billboards along the freeway.

Planning member Barbara Smith, who participated in the drafting of the original sign ordinance and is opposed to the revisions, said, "I resent these revisions. We worked hard for the good of the city, not just one person. Now with every switch in political power it starts all over again."

'Sak Yak' to feature G.E. topic

The value of the general education program will be the topic of a presentation by James R. Kears, a BYU professor of economics, at Thursday's "Sak Yak" at noon in the Memorial Lounge, ELWC.

The "Sak Yak" lecture series, sponsored by the ASBYU President's Office, is open to all students to attend and enjoy while they eat lunch or rest between classes.

"G.E. is Specific" is the title of Kears' remarks. His comments are expected to elicit student response and questions concerning the G.E. program, ASBYU Executive Vice President Jon Bratt said.

Theft conviction rate increasing

By KIMBALL HANSEN
Universe Staff Writer

The number of BYU students apprehended and convicted of misdemeanors is increasing, according to Sgt. Clive Winn, BYU Security.

"Even though the number of complaints has declined this year, the total number of convictions has been higher," Winn said.

Theft and possession of marijuana are the most common types of misdemeanors involving BYU students, according to Winn.

Winn said the most prevalent crime is theft, which includes shoplifting at the BYU Bookstore.

Roger Utley, director of the BYU Bookstore, said more shoplifters are being apprehended this year.

"During the year 1977-78 there was a decrease in the number of shoplifting convictions," Utley said. "However, this year it has been increasing."

Shoplifting is considered a serious matter by both the Bookstore and BYU Security.

"Within the past two years, only one person apprehended for shoplifting has not been convicted, and that case was questionable," Utley said.

According to Winn, BYU Security has a 95 percent conviction rate for all misdemeanors.

BYU Security investigator Malin Shepherd explained the procedure of convicting a shoplifter in the Bookstore. "As the shoplifter walks past the cashier with the intent of not paying for an item, he is confronted by the floorwalker."

"If it is clear shoplifting has occurred, the floorwalker takes the suspect to the bookstore security room where a report is filed," he said. Security is called in and a statement, fingerprints and photographs are taken, according to Shepherd. "The suspect is then released on his own recognizance."

Shepherd said the suspect is then arraigned and given a chance to make his plea. "If a guilty plea is entered, and if he pleads innocent, a trial date is set."

According to Shepherd, most students enter a guilty plea. The sentence can be up to six months in jail and/or a $299 fine. "The sentence is usually reduced or suspended," Shepherd said, "and the student is placed on one year's probation."

Pam DeMill, court clerk in charge of criminal misdemeanors, says an average of 10 to 12 complaints a week are received, usually from BYU Security. "Most of them are petty larceny cases," she said.

Women are charged with misdemeanors as often as men, Ms. DeMill said.

Veterinarians' image changing

The image of today's veterinarian is that of a person who is self-employed, well-paid, and works out of doors most of the time with animals that are choice specimens of their breeds.

That image, says a BYU teacher-researcher, is drawing many young people to the study of veterinary medicine. These students learn quickly that being a veterinarian is not easy.

The reality is that there are several years of intensive, highly technical study involved in getting a degree in veterinary medicine, says Dr. Stanley D. Allen, a veterinarian and associate professor of animal science at BYU. And when the student becomes a veterinarian, he will find that there are better opportunities in research than in private practice.

Students are arriving at BYU as freshmen with their eyes fixed on entrance to a school of veterinary medicine after graduation, Dr. Allen says. They are finding competition for entrance to these schools is just as intense as it is for entrance to schools of human medicine.

Dr. Allen said, "I guess there's a traditional feeling that veterinary medicine ought to be easier than human medicine. Well, it's not. It's the same thing, only a different species."

Veterinary schools are "very political," Dr. Allen explained. They are far more likely to admit students from their own state. Students from other states must be extremely well prepared. In general, students must have grades at the high B plus level or above to be admitted.

As advisor to the nearly 175 pre-veterinary students at BYU, Dr. Allen notes, "I have to be individualize every student's program." In order to meet the requirements set by most schools of veterinary medicine, the students' schedules are so tight that they have a choice of only one non-essential class in four years of college.

Dr. Allen said, "I like a student who wants to be a scientist — a medical scientist. Those are the ones who do the best."

Because the best pre-veterinary students are those with experience, the BYU Animal Science Department has recently introduced an animal health technology program for those who want to become veterinary assistants.

Money may be one factor that is drawing students to veterinary medicine. Although veterinarians do not, on the average, have incomes as high as those of physicians, they do have an average income of about $30,000 a year.

The most crowded area of veterinary medicine is the urban small animal practice, Dr. Allen reports. There is a shortage of veterinarians in rural areas.

Cougar Doug Peterson, wrestling in the 190-pound slot, scores a takedown on his way to a 10-5 win over Colorado's Kevin Jackson.

Y matmen break Buffs

By LISA JOHNSON
Assistant Sports Editor

In a contest marked by ominously close individual matches, the hosting Cougar grapplers downed the University of Northern Colorado Buffaloes 29-15 Wednesday night.

The match featured six decisions, two of them with single point differentials. "They definitely are a good wrestling team," Cougar Coach Fred Davis said of the Big Eight competitors.

Although BYU began the match with a six point advantage because of a CU forfeiture to Brad Anderson in the 118 pound slot, the score was quickly evened when Cougar Lyle Stratton was overpowered by Derek Glenn to lose by fall with 1:07 remaining in the third period.

The Cougars pulled ahead when Ed Maisey, 134 pounds, won his bout with Lewis Sondgeroth, 9-8. The score was tied at the end of the third period, but Maisey was awarded a point for riding time to take the match.

Craig Prete, 142 pounds, put more space between the Buffs and the Cougars when he too won his match by a single point. The bout with Jim Sondgeroth was temporarily halted in the third period while the injury clock ran for both Sondgeroth, who lost a tooth, and Prete, who suffered a cut elbow. Despite their injuries, the two decided to continue the match and Prete was the second Cougar to be saved by a point or riding time.

CU threatened the Cougar lead again during the 30 pound match, when Buff Scott Neitenbach outscored Jerry Dodge, 10-7, bringing the total score to a tight 9-12.

The Cougars then began to pull away when 158 pound Donnie Owen scored the only BYU pin in an aggressive match that ended with 18 seconds to spare in the third. "He was a scrappy kid," Owen said of freshman Steve McNear, "but I think my experience as what decided it."

At 167 pounds, Billy Boyd gave his season record a winning aura for the first time by shutting out Pat Shaw, 8-0. Brad Hansen followed at 177 pounds, and took his match with Bryan Neitenbach, 8-4. Davis cited conditioning as the biggest factor in the Cougar win and Cougar Doug Peterson attributed his match to that factor. Wrestling at 190 pounds, Peterson beat Kevin Jackson, 10-5. Heavyweight Cougar Scott Robinson was pinned with 43 seconds remaining in the second period, but the Cougar lead withstood Buff Brad Young's six points to finish the match 15-29.

The BYU wrestlers leave this morning for Boise, where they will defend their title at the Mountain Intercollegiate Wrestling Association Tournament in which they will wrestle matmen from 15 other teams.

Ice-cats in Denver for match

The BYU ice hockey team opens a two game Colorado road trip tonight, as the Cougars meet the University of Northern Colorado at McNichols Arena in Denver.

Tonight's contest is a non-league game, although the Cougars and the Grizzlies are tied for the league lead in the Rocky Mountain Hockey Association.

In two previous games this year, the Cougars and UNC have split the action. BYU took the first game at Bountiful, Utah, by a score of 7-3. UNC won in Denver, 6-2. BYU travels to Laramie, Wyo., Saturday night to face-off against the Cowboys in a league game. The Cougars defeated the Cowboys in the first meeting of the teams by a score of 7-5.

The Cougars' center, LeRon Crapo, leads the league with 12 points, followed by teammate Malcolm Kano with 11 points.

Readers Digest director speaks on advertising

By CHERYL GILLAM
Universe Staff Writer

"Many advertisers think it is more fun to be fancy than to sit down and think clearly about their copy," the creative director of The Readers Digest told a BYU audience Wednesday.

Anthony L. Antin, vice president and director of creative services for the popular magazine, has been on campus Wednesday and today for speeches sponsored by the Communications Department. He addressed the BYU Advertising Club in a banquet Wednesday night and will talk today at 10 a.m. in the Varsity Theater on "The ABC's of Effective Print."

The advertising business, Antin said, is divided into two parts: The "fancy ones" and the "meat and potatoes." "I'm the meat and potatoes kind," he added.

According to the New York based advertiser, the simple basics of advertising are important, not the "fancy doodads."

"Most advertisers kind of forget what motivates typical folks," he said. "The only time to communicate with people is when they can see a self interest — like entertainment or information."

Concerning advertising education, Antin said, "Advertising is really communicating and persuading. We learn advertising, and not how to communicate and persuade."

For an example Antin pointed to the car industry. "Car dealers show the car either going up or down a highway. People expect the car to run. They should show what is under the hood."

"Some advertisements are like an inside joke, the people in advertising get it, but the people outside don't," Antin said.

Antin added, "The American public isn't dull or flat-footed. You can be sophisticated, fun and fancy in ads, just so long as they are clear."

Antin worked closely with the LDS Church to produce the recent series of advertising supplements in The Readers Digest which have attracted worldwide attention for Mormonism. So far, four special supplements have been published, and a fifth is scheduled for release this April.

The supplements are aimed at improving the public image of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and imparting more information about its programs to the magazine's readers. Antin said The Readers Digest is "proud and happy" to carry these supplements because they are unique advertisements.

World's longest cake baked for Berry College birthday

MOUNT BERRY, Ga. (AP) — The bakers at Berry College had a little problem after cooking up what they say is the world's longest cake — all 177.5 feet of it.

The cake — baked as part of a celebration marking the school's 77th birthday Tuesday — was unveiled in a room only 103 feet long. School officials fixed that by bending the cake around the room's corners.

The school said that Benjamin H. Williams, a certified public accountant, confirmed the length of the cake.

The 1978 Guinness Book does not contain a "longest cake" category but does list the largest cake ever made: the Baltimore City Maryland, Bicentennial Cake of July 4, 1976, which weighed 69,860 pounds. It contained an estimated 10,000 eggs, 21,600 pounds of sugar and 415 pounds of salt.

As for the Berry College cake, school officials listed these ingredients: 135 pounds of butter; 270 pounds of sugar; about 202 pounds of flour; 90 dozen eggs; 16 gallons, two quarts, two cups of milk; one gallon, one cup of baking powder; 10 tablespoons salt; three quarts vanilla, and 495 pounds of sugar icing.

Housing short for marrieds; over 1,000 on waiting list

Getting married may be pleasant, but waiting in line to get into a married student housing unit is often painful.

More than 1,000 applicants are on BYU's waiting list, according to Howard E. Davis, manager of the married student housing. Students are put into the units on a first-come first-served basis, Davis said.

Turnover of student families in these units is about 50 per cent each year, and according to Davis, the greatest termination is in April, followed by August and December.

There are now 612 units under BYU married student housing, including 462 apartments in Wymount Terrace and 150 trailers in Wyview Park. This number will increase to 962 when new apartments at Wymount Terrace are completed in the fall, he said.

Educators to study basics at fourth annual seminar

More than 1,500 people are expected to participate Friday in the Fourth Annual Mid-year Conference sponsored by the College of Education.

The theme of the conference will be "The Basics Re-addressed: The R's in Five Dimensions," according to Dr. Curtis N. Van Alfen, dean of the College of Education.

Dr. Walter D. Talbot, Utah superintendent of Public Instruction, is one of the featured speakers for the conference.

Sessions will begin at 8 a.m. in the Main Ballroom, ELWC.

"We are looking forward to a successful conference directed to those educators, administrators, students and parents who are concerned with the educational programs of today," Van Alfen said.

Talbot will participate with other well known scholars and educators in discussing reading, writing, arithmetic, arts and resources — the five R's — in modern educational programs.

Other conference participants include Dr. John I. Goodlad, dean of the Graduate School of the University of California at Los Angeles; Dr. Charles H. Madsen, Jr., professor of psychology at Florida State University; Dr. Eliot Butler, dean of the BYU College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences; and Dr. Lael J. Woodbury, dean of the BYU College of Fine

Twins double in role to beat labor laws

The script for the TV show, Little House on the Prairie, called for a girl to play the daughter of a boy. In California there is a law that prohibits the amount of work that any child can do. The solution to the tricky problem has been found by hiring twins to fill the roles in shows and alternate them from scene to scene.

and, on the other hand, the Western show, hired twins, Lindsay and Sidney Greenbush, to play young nieces. Although the girls are 8-10 years old, when the series started two alternated in the Carrie role in order to comply with the California

In a stage production there is no way to "trick" the audience with a set of doubles, but when a TV or movie script calls for twins the producer can solve the dilemma in two ways. First, he can cast an actor in a dual role and let the camera adjust for the twins. The other solution is filming a set of twins for the acting and dubbing in the voices.

Most twins in show business aren't theater career oriented; if they can do a couple of commercials they will be satisfied. When jobs in the entertainment industry become scarce they get their kicks by switching identities, as a prank, on teachers, peers and casting directors.

Movies and TV series are not the only users of twins. In TV commercials there is a recurring dual job opportunity. From time to time advertisers have paged twins to sell products from chewing gum to soft drinks.

Indian baskets contributed to Y

A collection of handmade Hopi Indian baskets, valued at $24,000, has been donated to the BYU Indian Education Department.

The donation was made by a Seattle, Wash., area couple, members of the LDS Church and BYU alumni.

The items were collected by Walter Crawford, Phoenix, Ariz., who is considered to be a specialist in Indian arts and crafts. "This is one of the most complete collections of any Hopi group," Crawford said. The couple, who wish to remain anonymous, bought the collection from Crawford.

John Maestas, director of Multi-Cultural Education, said the collection is in excellent condition. Most of the baskets are less than 20 years old, but basket making is a lost art and this raises their value, Maestas said.

The baskets are made of coiled plaques of Yucca fiber and wicker-weave, a wild desert plant. The time put into one of the baskets is about 300 hours, Maestas said. The collection needs to be kept in a dry condition, because any moisture will cause it to mildew, he added.

Maestas said the donation was made so students and other interested people can get a closer look at the Indian culture, and appreciate the way it is expressed today.

John Maestas, director of Multi-Cultural Education, admires a collection of handmade Hopi Indian baskets. The baskets were donated to BYU by an anonymous Seattle, Wash., couple.

Cabin destroyed in fiery explosion

A two-story vacation cabin valued at more than $100,000 was destroyed in a fiery explosion Wednesday morning in Provo canyon.

The cabin, owned by Dale A. Smith, 564 N. 550 East, Orem, was located about one mile north of Sundance ski resort. It was vacant at the time of the fire.

Floyd A. Lundell, Utah County fire marshal, said the explosion was probably caused by a leak in a propane gas line in the cabin. "The leak caused propane to completely fill the structure," Lundell said. "It was probably ignited by the pilot light in the stove."

Lundell said the explosion was of such force that "we found wood from the cabin over 150 feet away, and insulation in the tops of the surrounding trees."

Hampered by more than four feet of snow and the lack of an adequate water supply, the Provo and Orem firemen who responded to the call were forced to string out several hundred feet of hose in order to fight the blaze.

U.S. citizen finally enters America

PLAINFIELD, Ind. (AP) — After 20 years in a Chinese labor camp, Daniel Kelly sat down Wednesday to an American lunch of homemade beef stew and carry-out fried chicken. He said he wanted to find a job and build a home. He also said that American life surprised him at every turn.

"All the way from Hong Kong, we've been impressed with the wealth — and the waste," he said.

"Everything is surprising. Yesterday was surprising. Today has been surprising. Just everything is surprising," he said.

Kelly, 38-year-old son of an American missionary in China, spent 20 years at hard labor there before being released last month. He arrived in the United States Tuesday with his wife, Flora, their three children, and his 74-year-old mother, O Mu E.

His visa specifies a one-year visit — the stated reason is for a visit to his sister, Elizabeth Peabody, in Indiana — but "they (the Chinese) knew that once I got out, I wouldn't come back," he said.

Kelly is an American citizen but had never seen the United States before. He says he was imprisoned for refusing to renounce his citizenship and for trying to flee China.

Wednesday's generous meal was spread on a table in the basement of the Quaker Friends Meeting House. Kelly contrasted it with a lunch in China, which he said would have been "a bowl of rice, some boiled cabbage and hot tea. Meat was rationed, two pounds a month."

On Tuesday night the Kellys had camped out in the Peabody family room, a space large enough to sleep five Chinese families, according to Mrs. Peabody. "They just weren't used to having all that room," she said, adding that the culture shock had been even harder on their mother and on the Kelly children than on her brother. However, she said the shock would have been even worse if they had not spent a month in Hong Kong.

Kelly said faith had helped him reach the United States and would help him build a future for his family.

"What I want to do is put up a home and let all of us start a new life," he said, "because we'll have to start from scratch and learn from the beginning."

"I hope to do what I can do. What I need is help, for people to help me do something. The only thing I have on hand is my Chinese. I could translate or help with Sino-American relations. I just don't want to sit around and waste our time. I just want somebody to help me find a job or something."
